Sunbeam.

The small Sunbeam.

The old theory is a Baptist disease.

A burly moustache droops a short-cigar.

Grave subjects—Those in a dissecting room.

Purchasers of "rare old china" are often stuck-up people.

Why should a tenant insist on a lower rent when rents are high?

He that lends to the tramp giveth to the scoundrel.—*Devil's Chaff.*Noted speeches.—They taken down by a phonograph.—Kirk's Collection.

What a Digger squalls of grief she has when a face. When a woman gets mad she slaps her hair.

A good many people don't know any better than to use parrot medicines in the kitchen.—Key State Journal.

A new addition.—A jury is body of men organized to end out what site has been snatched from her.

The right lower.—The one where you meet your "neighbours." The left lower.—The one where you not your "gull" sweet-heart.

A horse-car conductor refused to permit a man carrying Devil's Chaff to board his car the other day, because the meanness is a spoiler.

"Waiter, here's a fly in my tea."

"Thank you, sir, I'll not notice it." Lays down a check for five cents extra.—Boston Post.

Six-year-old innocent.—Mamma, why is Mrs. Fashions called a grave widow? Mamma—Because old Picketovore died of hay fever, my dear.

Mamma, what are twins made for? asked a little girl the other day. Her precocious older brother replied: "So that children may play pranks."

"You're a bright one, FOR A KID," said the corner to the new father. "Yes, and I have stood by him since the day he was born."

A connection that has invented a pipe that will light itself. This is an unfeathered attempt to force honest painters to find some new way to kill them.—*Boston Post.*There is a man in New York who makes his living by turning red noses white. In the same city there are seven thousand who make their living by turning white noses red.—Longfellow's Argus.

A male undertaker, the other day, to make a jury believe he was dead, but a chap hired by the opposing counsel softly whispered, "Let's go out and drink," and the fellow heard not the last time.

"How are you, John? I'm dashed glad to see you. Very well, Charley. Come in and take a drink, my fellow. Don't offer me more. I like to face facts—and when we do, it's just and sound."

"Men often jump at conclusions," says the professor. "So do I. We saw a dog jump at the conclusion of a car which was sucking through the opening of a partly-closed door, and it made more disturbance than a church scandal."

"There are lots of men in this country who ought to be in the same condition that this gate is in," said the farmer, as he sat behind a lightning rod pedler. "How is that? Are not men the fact of nature, and when we do, it's just and sound."

A tall singer says that a dog does not understand man from being domesticated. But he means no part of the man who fails in his power for his knife and found he had left seven old books in there, if he wants to be called an unprincipled old shyster."

Paternal wisdom!—"What's ensilage?" "Why—h'm—enlarge my son, is—un-ensilage, you know, the incision, my son. Sound like a doctor, doesn't it? To stick things together, you know? There, now, this is away to your point, and don't distract me now." And that boy thinks his pa is a very encyclopedic old shyster.

Kidney troubles and liver troubles, unless checked in time by Dr. David Kennedy's "Favocote Remedy" will end in constipation, rheumatism and gravel. The latter are aliments of very serious character. "Favocote Remedy" acts upon the disordered kidneys and liver with quickness and certainty. It is Nature's own device for this purpose. Ask for it when you are next in the store, or write to the Doctor at Rondout, N. Y.

WANTED TO BE BANGED.

Johnson Fox was a man of fifty, with iron-gray hair and dignified look, and only a close observer would have noticed the brandy in his eye as he entered a hair-dressing shop on Michigan Avenue and politely queried of the woman in attendance:

"Madam, do you hang hair?"

"Every day in the week sir," she replied.

"Then I wish to be banged, and I will afterward select a summer bonnet."

She resisted, and he persisted, and when she finally made the fatal discovery that he was "slowed" she ordered him out.

"I'll never go there till I'm hanged!" he exclaimed, as he sat down and removed his hat.

The woman ran out and brought in a steward, who was ready to do the hanging, but after a struggle of sixty seconds he had one eye closed and his nose knocked out of shape. It was not until the arrival of an officer that Fox was hauled out of doors and his broadcloth coat torn from nail to collar, and as this didn't fill him full he had to be brought down.

"Are you a stranger here?" queried his honor, as the prisoner stood before him.

"Yes."

"Wouldn't it have been just as well to get drunk in your own town?"

"I gorged a little brandy just for my sore throat, and I presume I swallowed a small quantity."

"It seems just that way to me, too. Well, you look as if you got all the banging you asked for."

"I think so."

"And is your throat still sore?"

"It is."

"Then I'll ask you to try my prescription. Come. Here it is:

"Black Maria, 2 parts.

"Workhouse, 8 parts.

"Use as directed for thirty days."

"I suppose I can leave ten dollars here in place of taking the medicine?" said the prisoner.

"Yes."

He handed over an "X" asked for his cane and tooth-brush, and walked out without a glance at the boy who got in the way to offer him half a lemon for three cents.—Deseret Free Press.

ANOTHER AT TOURNAI.

The King of Abyssinia cut off the noses of those who take snuff, and the lips of those who smoke. The King is fated more than Theodore was. Cruel to a degree, he does not, however, like life. He cuts off the feet and hands of people who offend him. He puts out their eyes by pointing hot needles at them. You can buy nothing without the King's order; and no one will shelter you without his order—in fact, no more complete despotism could exist. It cannot last, for the King will go from one madness to another.—C. Gordon, in Central Africa.

TESTING EGGS.

Les Moutons gives the following old recipe for testing the age of eggs, which, it thinks, seems to have been forgotten. As Nature thinks so too, we may reproduce the recipe for your younger readers, and also as having other possible applications: Dissolve 120 grmms of common salt in a liter of water. An egg put in this solution on the day it is laid will sink to the bottom; one a day old will not reach quite to the bottom of the vessel; an egg three days old will swim in the liquid; while one more than three days old will swim on the surface.

WOMEN NEVER YESTERDAY.

If the crabbed old bachelor who uttered this sentiment could, but witness the intense thought, deep study and thorough investigation of women in determining the best medicines to keep their families well, and would obey their sagacity and wisdom respecting their health, the best and gratifying thing is to keep their families in perfect health, at mere nominal expense. He would be forced to acknowledge that such sentiments are baseless and false.—Piquante.
